Dear Rolf,

Herewith my final Column as promised and I hope it reaches you in time and that its contents are acceptable.

I have enjoyed writing these Columns and I appreciate your invitation to do them, but it will be a relief for me to hand over to someone else, assuming you, or your successor, have been able to locate a willing new Columnist. Looking after my wife, with her Alzheimer's disease, plus the domestic chores, is becoming almost a full-time job and these extra writing commitments, enjoyable as they ~~are~~, can become quite a burden.

I am toying with the idea of getting my 12 Columns reprinted privately to make a little booklet which would not be for sale but which I would distribute to my friends. This would, of course, be subject to Wiley's approval and I have asked Betty Finkelstein to make enquiries on my behalf. She is Manager of Administration and writes to me regularly to let me know each time that she has arranged for my 60.00 dollar cheque to be posted. Anyway, she has passed my letter over to Virginia Martin, the publisher who handles Color, and I shall no doubt hear from her before long. I take it you would have no objection to my doing this. Of course, I may find it too expensive to justify my spending the money.

With my best wishes,

Yours sincerely,

David
